

Why New Century City Projects Have Extraordinary Value

Discussion note

Michael Joroff

1) Develop Social Capital – human and institutional

- beyond real estate and economic development
- they reconstitute own resources to be more innovative and creative
  - university-industry relations
  - education – shifts the paradigm and build new partnerships
- aim is to develop human capital for the new economy

2) Position the City – if not the nation – as a real player in this new, global economy

3) Rethink and exploit the value of their strengths and build from what they have

4) Blend cyber and physical environment – at a variety of scales to change the fabric of the city

5) Anticipate and serve new life patterns that break boundaries age, place and occur anytime, anywhere

6) Promote The “Dream”, Experience Society

Rolf Jensen, “The Dream Society: from Information to Imagination” 1999

7) Promote new business opportunities

IT and communication companies with “Apps chasing an elusive market”

Value adding, cross industry organizational contributions

New partnerships