MARKETING MASS CULTURE:
Lecture 16: Robert Rauschenberg’s Coca-Cola Plan —> International Pop

Pop Art is: Popular (designed for a mass audience), Transient (short-term solution), Expendable (easily forgotten), Low cost, Mass produced, Young (aimed at youth), Witty, Sexy, Gimmicky, Glamorous, Big business....
— letter from Richard Hamilton to the architects Alison and Peter Smithson, 16 January 1957

I. The artist’s body – an “index” of where we are
A. Pollock -the index is pulverized and disassembled, distributed, sublimated into the Sublime
B. Rauschenberg / Johns / Cage
   1. the index is all, but what is the index? is the object an index or a symbol? (of artistic agency, of manufacturing, of the artist’s body, of the artist as everyman/ no-man?)
   2. mass culture is embedded into the art: “flatbed” aesthetic (Leo Steinberg)
C. Overall historical trajectory: from the primitive as a pulverized tabula rasa (‘50s) to pop primitive as appropriation of mass culture or stock images (‘60s) to postmodern appropriation of modernism as a kind of mass culture (‘80s-90s)

II. Coca-cola Plan unfolding, but not always as planned
A. Japan: Pop as “kawaii” (cuteness)
B. Europe vs. Cocolasierung (globalization)
C. Latin America: Conceptualism, Antropofagia and Globalist critique
D. China: Pop and Castigation

III. International Pop: beginning with Postwar Britain and a phantasmagorical “aesthetics of plenty” (anticipates Kruschev and Nixon in the “Kitchen Debate,” 1959)
A. Aesthetic relations to U.S. commodity culture
B. The Independent Group – ambivalent consumers who put the “Pop” in art
   1) architects, artists, curators, historians
   2) exhibitions: Parallel of Life and Art (‘53), Man, Machine & Motion (‘55), This is Tomorrow (‘56)
C. Eduardo Paolozzi and the “Psychological Atlas” (1947-53)
D. Richard Hamilton’s Duchampian cool
