REQUIREMENTS:
   (1) Class attendance and participation in discussions, which will focus upon the readings assigned for the week.
   (2) A mid-term exam on March 18 and a final exam during exam period.
   (3) A research paper of about 12-15 pages in length. Papers should answer a carefully posed historical question and be based to a substantial extent upon research in primary sources, that is, documents that for most topics will be from the eighteenth century. The papers can focus upon any aspect of the Revolution, but must go beyond work done in class. All topics must be approved on or before Tuesday, April 6. The final papers must include footnotes or endnotes and a bibliography composed in a correct and comprehensible form, and are due on Thursday, May 13, the final day of classes.

ASSIGNED BOOKS:

READING SCHEDULE:
February 9-11. Background, continued, and Ideology.

Locke, Second Treatise of Government, chs. 1-4, 8-13, 17-19. (Note that Locke’s treatise is available at http://www.constitution.org/jl/2ndtreat.htm)

Lengel, General George Washington, 3-19. You can either skim or skip the stories of Washington’s disastrous service as a Virginia military officer in 1754 and of British General Edward Braddock’s astounding defeat in western Pennsylvania in 1755, but read the conclusions on pages 60-62, and also 63-67, 77-80.

February 16: Monday Schedule.

February 18: Overview of the Independence Movement

Wood, American Revolution, 27-44.

Start the readings for next Tuesday.

For Feb. 23: Stephen Hopkins, "Essay on Trade" (1764); Hopkins, “The Rights of Colonies Examined” (later 1764); Daniel Dulany, “Considerations on the Propriety of Imposing Taxes in the British Colonies…” (1765); Richard Bland, “An Inquiry into the Rights of the British Colonies” (1766) (note the quotations from a British writer---Thomas Whately---that Bland includes), and John Dickinson, “Letters from a Farmer in Pennsylvania…” (1768) in Merrill Jensen, ed., Tracts of the American Revolution, pp. 3-18, 41-62, 94-163. Also Morison, Sources and Documents, 14-24 and 43-45, which includes the Virginia Resolutions of 1765, Soam Jenyns, “The Objections to the Taxation of our American Colonies by the Legislature of Great Britain, briefly consider’d” (London, 1765), and Dickinson’s Letter III (which Jensen strangely skipped).

NOTE: It's a good idea read the pamphlets in chronological order. How did the American argument shift between the two Hopkins pamphlets, and between Dulany and Dickinson? If you can identify where an author is saying what everyone is saying and focus instead on what's new, and on how the American position is developing (the British didn't change much), you'll be reading efficiently and intelligently. It might take some practice to get the hang of that. Be sure to take notes on each pamphlet immediately after finishing it or all of them will quickly melt together in your mind.

For Feb. 25: Accounts of the Stamp Act uprisings, the Sons of Liberty, and the Virginia Association of 1770 in "Readings."

March 2-4. From Resistance to Revolution, 1770-1776.

Jefferson, "Summary View" (1774), and Paine’s “Common Sense,” in Jensen, Tracts, 256-76, 400-446.

Morison, Sources and Documents, 100-115 (Wilson, 1774), 116-25, 137-48.

Wood, American Revolution, 47-62.

Maier, From Resistance to Revolution, 161-296.

Lengel, General George Washington, 81-127.
(The discussion will focus in part on the three pamphlets in the assigned readings. What distinguishes the arguments of Wilson and Jefferson from Dickinson’s in the “Farmer’s Letters”? Is Paine’s Common Sense a logical outgrowth of the line of argument American pamphlets had taken, or something else altogether? How exactly did Paine justify Independence? Also, what developments between 1774 and 1776 help explain the changing character of the conflict “from resistance to revolution”?)

March 9-11. Declarations of Independence; Loyalism.

Especially for March 9: The English Declaration of Rights (1689); an early draft of the Virginia Declaration of Rights (by George Mason) that appeared in the Pennsylvania Gazette, June 12, 1776; the Jefferson/committee draft of the Declaration of Independence with Congress’s editings, all in "Readings." The main focus of attention will be the draft Declaration with Congress’s editings. What did Congress do, and why? (You might also take a look at Morison’s version of the preamble to the Virginia constitution on p. 151 of Sources and Documents and see if you notice anything odd.)

March 16. The British View; Review.

Andrew Jackson O'Shaughnessy, “‘If Others Will Not Be Active, I Must Drive’: George III and the American Revolution,” Early American Studies, Vol. II (Spring 2004), 1-46, in “Readings.”

March 18. Midterm Exam.

March 30, April 1 and 6. The Revolutionary War and the Peace of Paris.

Shy, A People Numerous and Armed, chapters 4, 6, 7, and10, (roughly pages 81-115, 133-79, 213-44).

Wood, American Revolution, 74-88.

(Paper topics due by April 6!)

April 8, 13. The First State Constitutions.

April 15. 22. The Confederation and the 1780s; the Articles of Confederation.
Wood, American Revolution, 70-74, 91-150.
Morison, Sources and Documents, 178-86, 203-33.
Thomas Jefferson, "Query XIV," from his Notes on the State of Virginia (written in 1781 and published in 1785), available at:
(Scroll down to the part where Jefferson discusses what he proposes to do with Virginia’s slave population, and why it couldn’t just stay in Virginia.)
Pauline Maier, “The Revolutionary Origins of the American Corporation,”
William and Mary Quarterly, 3d Series, 1 (January 1993), 51-84, available through “JStor” on the MIT libraries’ website (VERA).
James Madison's "Vices of the System," in "Readings."
Start Madison’s Notes.

April 20. Patriots’ Day, recalling the Battles at Lexington and Concord; Holiday

Madison, Notes of Debates in the Federal Convention. Start with the Introduction, Madison's preface, and pp. 21-166. This includes the convention's opening; presentation of the Virginia plan and the convention’s discussion of its provisions as a committee of the whole; the presentation and rejection of the alternative New Jersey plan; the resolutions the committee of the whole reported on June 19 (see them on pp. 148-51: they are key to the debates thereafter) and the delegates’ discussion of them as a convention. Skim the make-or-break debates on resolutions 7 and 8 that runs from pp. 220-98, with the little additional flare-up on 299-302. Thereafter, debates proceeded with less fireworks, and you can pick and choose which issues to follow. Debates over the presidency, which many said was the hardest issue the convention faced, are on pp. 306-14, 322-35, 356-72.

As a result of these discussions, the convention produced a revised set of resolutions (pp. 379-85), which a Committee of Detail made into a draft constitution while the convention adjourned from July 26-August 6 (see pp. 385-96). When the delegates returned, they debated the draft, revisiting issues it had discussed before in the light of other decisions. Note the discussions of slavery and the slave trade on pp. 409-13, 502-08. In late August the convention set up a Committee of Eleven to propose solutions to several problems it hadn't solved. The committee's recommendations opened another round of debates, especially on the executive (see 573-79, 582-97, and 605-66 on impeachment). Finally, on September 12, a Committee of Style charged with incorporating agreed-upon changes into the draft constitution and refining its wording presented its report (616-27). That led to still more debates, in the course of which George Mason raised the issue of a bill of rights (630). Read also the record of the convention's closing days, 650-59.

May 4-6. Ratification of the Constitution.
- Morison, Sources and Documents, 305-62.
- The Federalist, No. 10, available at:
  http://www.constitution.org/fed/federa10.htm
  (Note: this site identifies the author of the “Federal Farmer” as Richard Henry Lee, which is probably incorrect. It remains uncertain who wrote the series.)
  Amendments to the constitution proposed by the Massachusetts Ratifying convention (February 6, 1788), South Carolina (May 23, 1788), Virginia (June 27, 1788), and New York’s “Instrument of Ratification” (July 26, 1788), in Helen Veit, ed., Creating the Bill of Rights (Baltimore, 1991), 14-28, and in "Readings." Are these sets of demands impossibly different? Are there any notable common elements?

- James Madison’s proposal for a federal Bill of Rights as presented to the House of Representatives on June 8, 1789, and the set of amendments Congress finally sent to the states for ratification in September 1789, in “Readings.”
- Selections from the Adams correspondence and the writings of Judith Sargent Murray, in “Readings.”
