THE AGE OF REASON

Subject Description. In this subject we will study the incomplete transition from tradition to modernity that took place in Europe from the seventeenth to the early nineteenth centuries. We will examine trials, art, literature, music, politics, society and culture to understand how the traditional triad of monarchy, aristocracy and religion gave way provisionally and imperfectly to the modern triad of democracy, equality, and ideology. Although the intellectual and chronological scope of the class is broad, we will study several distinct events in depth in order to understand the period, including the trial of Galileo, the English Civil Wars of the mid-seventeenth century, the publication of the French Encyclopédie in the mid-eighteenth century, and the French Revolution of 1789.

Subject Requirements. Active class participation is central to our work together. Attendance is mandatory, and students are expected to arrive in class on time and prepared to discuss common readings. Students will write four five-page papers during the term. The first essay will be discussed in class and revised before a final grade is assigned. In addition, to satisfy the CI-H speaking requirement, we will stage the trial of Louis XVI in class during the week of April 28; students will be assigned a character and expected to participate in the trial. There will be no exams and no final. Each assignment will be weighted as follows in the calculation of the final grade, although these calculations will also take into account improved performance during the course of the semester:

- Class Participation 20 points
- Four 5-page essays 35 points each, 140 points total
- Oral Exercise (Trial of Louis XVI) 40 points
- TOTAL 200 points

Required Reading. The following books are available for purchase at the MIT Bookstore; they should also be on reserve in the Hayden Library. All other class readings, indicated with an asterisk (*), are available online at the class website, listed above.

David Lagomarsino & Charles Wood, eds. The Trial of Charles I: A Documentary History
Voltaire, Treatise on Toleration and Other Writings (Cambridge UP edition, 2000)
Jack Censer and Lynn Hunt, eds. Liberty, Equality, Fraternity: Exploring the French Revolution, with companion CD-ROM
Mary Shelley, Frankenstein, or The Modern Prometheus (Penguin, 1985)

Criteria for HASS CI Subjects. Communication intensive subjects in the humanities, arts, and social sciences should require at least 20 pages of writing divided among 3-5 assignments. Of these 3-5 assignments, at least one should be revised and resubmitted. HASS CI subjects should further offer students substantial opportunity for oral expression, through presentations, student-led discussion, or class participation. In order to guarantee sufficient attention to student writing and substantial opportunity for oral expression, the maximum number of students per section in a HASS CI subject is 18, except in the case of a subject taught without sections (where the faculty member in charge is the only instructor). In that case, enrollments can rise to 25, if a writing fellow is attached to the subject.

Statement on Cheating and Plagiarism: The web now hosts many sites which offer college-level papers of varying quality on a variety of topics. I am well acquainted with these sites, and with others that offer detection services to professors. Buying a paper and submitting it as your own work is cheating. Copying sections from someone else’s print or online work into your own without an acknowledgement is plagiarism. MIT has strict policies against both activities that I will fully enforce. For the appropriate MIT definitions and policies, visit the following websites. If you are uncertain about what constitutes cheating or plagiarism, please contact me before submitting the work in question.
